I would like to say that I really love my wife.....she is wonderful.....love her....yup, that is what I am saying....mucho love!!!! She braved the cold this morning to stand outside Best Buy on a hint that they might have some Xbox 360's coming in today and sure enough they did. She got one for me, then promptly called and told me that she had locked the keys in the truck. I thought that she was kidding and giving me an excuse to leave work, but she wasn't. Had to drive West side of town, about 40 miles to let her in the truck. Can't complain though, it used up the major debt that I was in for her picking up the 360 for me.....then again, she wouldn't have locked the keys in the truck if she hadn't been getting my Xbox 360.....crud, guess I still owe her big time. Have I mentioned that I love her????

So, one month to the day after launch I got my new Xbox 360, and what great games have I played.....Bejeweled 2. Yup, I've had it hooked up for almost 5 hours and it hasn't played any of the four great games I have ready for it. I did the Connect to my Windows XP home computer and played some music while doing a slide show on our Europe pictures and it was very nice in 1080i!!!! Amberpoo is playing now, so maybe I will get a chance to check out Call of Duty 2 later this evening.
